

Strategies for Declaring a Class, to produce immutable objects

---

This slide describes the strategies of creating a class, that when used, produces immutable objects.

- Make instance fields private and final.
- Do not define any setter methods.
- Create defensive copies in any getters.
- Use a constructor or factory method to set data, making copies of mutable reference data.
- Mark the class final, or make all constructors private.